Passage 1

Engaging in extra-curricular activities is a great way for students to explore new interests and develop important skills. Whether it's joining a sports team, a music club, or a science group, these activities provide opportunities for socializing and making new friends. Moreover, being involved in these activities can boost self-confidence and provide a sense of achievement. Schools often offer a variety of clubs and teams, so students should take the chance to try something new and discover their passions.

Extra-curricular activities also allow students to develop leadership skills. For instance, being a team captain or a club president requires taking on responsibilities and making decisions that benefit the group. Students can also learn to work collaboratively with others and enjoy many other advantages brought about by participating in the activities.

Overall, taking part in extra-curricular activities enriches the students' experience and it is a great way to help maintain a healthy work-life balance. So, students should seize the opportunity to get involved and make the most of their school years.
